It's #CervicalCancer awareness month!

The #HPV vaccine is highly effective. It can prevent 4 in 10 cases of the most high-risk strains of HPV – the number 1 cause of cervical cancer.

Yes, #VaccinesWork!

A lot of parents still mistakenly believe that getting the vaccine gives "permission" for teenagers to have sex. I had my daughter get it at 11 yrs because I can't be with her 24/7. Though I've educated her on reasons for delaying sexual activity, I can't ultimately prevent it. I would never ...see more Totally.

It's expensive, and only people with lots of money in my country could have it

It's very expensive in Ireland as the free vaccine is only available through schools and now to under 25s from this year. There should be a greater focus on preventative medicine in Ireland.

You could ask a hospital or clinic near you. There may be barriers to access, too... like cost. I know that there have been studies regarding acceptability of HPV vaccines in Botswana, but I'm not sure about how accessible it is.

HPV vaccine is currently scarce in Nigeria. It was available in November last year, and Victory Drugs Pharmacy stocks and administers it via her Vaccine Clinic. Availability of vaccines all year round is important please World Health Organization

Thanks for sharing this info, WHO! Awareness is great, but where is the service? This needs to be scaled; private and in particular public services should have the screening and vaccine provision services, so that poor girls and women could have access.

I remember being told I was a month too old to have the vaccine, when I was in my late teens or early 20s. I thought it was terrible that due to a few weeks I could not have it.
